

The Value of Correct Documentation

Documenting it right is as important as building it right

There are cases in which not having the correct documentation can lead to questions about the product. This is simple to correct in order to be in compliance with our processes and the customer's.

In recent years, we have been pushing to make sure that every improvement project that creates or modifies documentation makes certain that the document is relevant (is it reinforcing critical to process/quality tasks) and has a home.
